What is “The Bully Pulpit?”

THE BULLY PULPIT

Inaugurated for the 2008 elections, The Bully Pulpit Series was created to grow civic participation throughout the College of Charleston student community through access and active dialogue with our nation's leaders. Founded on the principle that an informed citizenry makes a strong democracy, the non-partisan series equips youthful voters with the information needed to engender political and social change.

We are exceedingly proud of the success of this effort, but it has grown to be so much more...

VALUE BEYOND MEASURE

The Bully Pulpit provides sponsors unprecedented brand exposure on both regional and national levels, supporting the highest ideals of American democracy in action. Politicians, academicians, journalists, industry leaders, community members, college students and audiences from around the state and nation come together in this relaxed, intimate setting to discuss issues of critical importance to South Carolina, the nation and the world. Brand sponsors will have the opportunity to meet all participating presidential candidates through invitation-only meetings and receptions, plus engage with students, academics and the media in this exceptional program.

It is an extraordinary marketing opportunity that offers the added value of supporting students eager to become tomorrow's leaders.
